Endosulfan plays an important role in controlling various agricultural pests, as evidenced by its wide usage. The aims of this study were to identify the metabolites of endosulfan and their concentrations in plum (Prunus domestica) root after foliar and root exposure. The metabolites of endosulfan were determined by gas chromatography-mass spectrometry (GC-MS), the content of endosulfan in plum root was determined by high-performance liquid chromatography (HPLC), and the 6a5afdab4c

Electropolymerization and electrochemical reactivity of catechol and 4-benzoylphenylhydrazone were studied by cyclic voltammetry with a glassy carbon electrode. The comparative study of the corresponding imine and nitrile groups revealed that catechol is reduced at a lower potential, whereas the reductive potential for 4-benzoylphenylhydrazone is shifted to a higher level. The first reduction wave, with two couples of reduction and oxidation, is ascribed to the formation of radical species with a corresponding HOMO-LUMO gap between the corresponding radical cation and anion. Reductive transformations involving imine intermediates are the most studied, but there are many reports describing the observation of a wide variety of oxidation processes involving nitrile functionalities. These findings

Advanced Camera Description: Works with webcam, webcam as an Image Dimensions: 96 x 96 Language Support: EnglishFirst of all, I'm so sorry if this doesn't belong here. I realize this is strictly women's issues. I will use this as an excuse to vent/rant/etc. So here's the deal. I have a dog. A cute, fluffy, loving dog. I've had her for almost 3 years now, and I've fallen in love with her. It's actually a pretty common theme among my friends, that the opposite sex is actually easier to fall in love with than my own species (humans). I'm very close to my sister's roommate (who also happens to be my sister). He's pretty nerdy, and very, very attractive to women. I mean, in his field, he's very handsome. He's made it seem like he's not interested in me, as of late. I think he's afraid of hurting my feelings because I have a dog. All my friends like his company and he would spend almost every weekend around the dinner table with them, so my dog and I are more the exception than the rule. But we're just two different breeds of dog, and I'd like a little understanding. If anyone has a problem with my dog, that I would NOT recommend having, unless they do have a pet and can relate… I have a few questions. 1. Can a female dog take care of a male? I've seen this once. The girl knew what the guy was up to and she had her tail between her legs. It was cute, but her tail still let him know it was time to go. 2. I was at the vet last week
