I am making sure each section is correctly sized relative to the others, and I have run into problems when it comes to margins and padding. So I'm trying to understand timing: If the total time of one page load is approximately 56ms, how can I set a page to load in under a second? Like 50ms or 40ms or whatever? I'm not talking about speed in the capacity of the server (faster hard drive, more RAM, etc), I'm talking about DOM operations like rendering and all that. My page contains a with ~600 s in it, though if you want to know, I'm going for simplicity's sake. A: This sort of stuff has gotten very weird. There is a guide here: You can use it in your coding, or even as a bookmark. The best part is that you can test and monitor your pages' timing and see if they're slow or not. Do what you need to do, or remember to bookmark it. A: If you feel you must learn all the CSS/DOM/HTTP/Network/IO basics on client side, then go for YSlow! Edit: I have no relationship to YSlow. I
