(ideal for an automotive entrepreneur). To which he was given the answer: "Sir, initially we do not aim to impress. We just decided to imitate the modesty of the greats, and therefore it seems to us that from the very beginning we are quite modest. One can see how French entrepreneurs tried to replace socialism with French conservatism, and how much the flattery of the peasant masses, marching towards the people, turned them into political puppets. Outside, politicians are seriously up in arms against this game. Monsieur Coulondre, surrounded by his young assistants, shouted from the podium: "This is not freedom, this is freedom from! We really want to stay away!" But on the other hand, the Figaro newspaper wrote that in reality everyone is right, and that "even today, at this historical moment, it is time for the peasants of the whole world to return to the land" [416 - "Financiers et Reviens" (July 12, 1848 ).]. The peasants began to restore order in their villages.

In doing so, they came to the conclusion that they were conservatives rather than revolutionaries and did not believe in the utopia of equality. They break decisively with revolutionary circles. After the fall of the Paris Commune, they did not despair, but with their naivety they reported on the political significance of the decree on voting working holidays, on the struggle over this decree, on the announcement of the London newspapers that it was a "stimulant" for the French people, etc. Victory Long live the Republic![417 - A shining image of republican, democratic socialism. - Note. author.] The Convention, elected in May 1848, was unanimous in its general policy. It was clear that the French bourgeoisie would not lead the revolution, and they had to turn the helm of the revolution against the revolution. There seemed to be only one way out of this impasse: counter-revolution. The July days, the massacre that broke out in Paris, forced the bourgeois to turn off the revolutionary path, and they turned to the king with a request to restore the monarchy. Louis XVI agreed to these terms, but announced that he would uphold his constitutional privileges. Power belonged to the Constituent Assembly, which worked out the people's constitution
