Ralph Peters, a retired Army four-star general who has been sharply critical of President Trump Donald John TrumpOmar fires back at Trump over rally remarks: 'This is my country' Pelosi: Trump hurrying to fill SCOTUS seat so he can repeal ObamaCare Trump mocks Biden appearance, mask use ahead of first debate MORE's policies, said Saturday that he's frustrated with how the president has decided to respond to a string of bomb threats against Jewish institutions in the U.S. "I've said for some time that I think that we should have an adequate response to just about everything. And if the president has not been given adequate resources to do that, then I'll be the first to condemn that," he told a Fox News panel. ADVERTISEMENT "But I am heartened by the fact that he's been given adequate resources," Peters continued, before later adding that he and other military leaders are "satisfied" with the lack of a military response so far. "We have the capacity to do it," Peters, a co-host of the "Washington Examiner" podcast, said. "No one wants to go into Israel and start blowing up things." Peters, who also served as commander of the U.S. Army's 2nd Armored Division, noted that the military could have a role in responding to the bomb threats, citing the frequent sharing of intelligence and secure communication between the two nations. He also appeared to endorse the deployment of the U.S. military to Israel and other parts of the Middle East. "We are engaged in a very asymmetric form of warfare with the terror groups that are deployed in the Middle East," he said. "We can absolutely defend them from anything that they might mount." Peters said the use of military force is the only way to solve the problem of attacks on Jewish institutions, which the Anti-Defamation League has reported have occurred as far back as 1979. "There's no question that we have to have a military capability in Israel and in other places around the Middle East," he 1cb139a0ed
