Add the System.Windows.Forms.dll Tannic acid-induced photoprotection in Arabidopsis and its correlation with reactive oxygen species scavenging activity. In this study, we examined whether the antioxidant defense system of Arabidopsis thaliana was modified by application of tannic acid (TA) in the presence of visible-light. We found that TA strongly induced the enzymatic activities of superoxide dismutase (SOD) and glutathione peroxidase (GPX) in Arabidopsis in a dose-dependent manner. In addition, we examined the correlation between the protective effect of TA and the free radical scavenging activities of TA. TA exhibited remarkable free radical scavenging activity at a concentration of 0.1 mM. In contrast, TA did not scavenge free radicals in the presence of 0.1 mM TA. Furthermore, we demonstrated that the protective activity of TA against visible light-induced oxidative stress is not related to its free radical scavenging activity. We conclude that TA induces the activities of SOD and GPX and that these enzymatic activities are associated with the ability of TA to protect plants against oxidative stress. Furthermore, these data indicate that TA activates antioxidant enzyme activity in Arabidopsis in the presence of visible light.Vulnerability of the male reproductive tract to cisplatin. Cisplatin is an important platinum-based chemotherapeutic agent used to treat many human malignancies. When cisplatin is administered intraperitoneally, it is an active agent against solid tumors but the high doses necessary to cure patients are associated with significant morbidity. Although nephrotoxicity is the major toxic side effect, other side effects including alopecia and myelosuppression may also occur. The objective of this study was to investigate the effects of cisplatin on the male reproductive system. Cisplatin-induced testicular
