Artificial Intelligence Demo Video Gallery Since we first introduced you to our team in our last blog, we've been hard at work building our first AI platform. We're really excited about the result, as it will significantly enhance the AI capabilities of our platform. Let's take a look at what the new platform has to offer. We've been able to build a working end-to-end system that already emulates existing intelligence systems in the world, but with some major advantages. The first advantage is that this system is able to perform real-time deep learning in one go, with minimal latency. It doesn't mean that you can do deep learning on multiple images and files in a single go, but it does mean that you can easily do this sort of deep learning on user generated content without having to process it one frame at a time, which in turn allows you to do things like video processing that would otherwise be impossible. The next advantage is that rather than just having one computer, it's built as an intelligent, multi-tier system that is easily expandable. You simply add more computers, or better still, more cloud instances, and the system's intelligence increases. The third advantage is that it is able to efficiently perform the process of "learning from scratch", which allows you to do things like give the system access to a new type of content, and it will be able to do what it does much better than you ever could. Here are some examples of how this system can be used: Building a time-lapse camera, which is currently impossible Building a system that automatically uploads photos to your phone that are ready to be uploaded to a photo stream The ability to easily process video and audio to make it searchable The automatic generation of interesting content by mixing images from different sources in real-time The addition of real-time deep learning to change the way your phone or tablet functions The ability to perform video editing and video finishing in real-time The ability to perform image and video classification And many, many more. 09e8f5149f
