All through the system, you can see exactly what your students know, if they are struggling, and how you can help them become the best. I love how I can go back and change previous answers for each question, enter comments, and name each question all on the same sheet. It saves me from having to download and print each assignment sheet, which was more time consuming and also stressful trying to keep track of all the sheets. Could use more options 3 By TheGobbleGobble This app has a lot of potential, but it's so limited. I wish there were more options for fields and formatting. I also would like to see some examples of questions and how they are scored. I'm currently using this app with my students, and I would like to make some changes to the questions before we put them to use in class. This is a great app 5 By Godwin-Njoku I love the fact that you can come up with your own questions and answers and then use the ones you have in place to create the test. This is a great app. Best 5 By Brax This is by far my favorite app. Easiest gradebook app out there 5 By blikat Easiest gradebook app out there. Q: How to make wxWidgets 1.58 window's title bar background dissappear? I'm using wxWidgets 1.58 on Linux for some internal project. I've added a wxFrame as it's parent and I'm using WxWidgets' wxMDIChildFrame class for showing a wxMDIChildFrame(readonly) as the main window. Now the problem is, I'm using this in a work environment which requires to make the program title bar disapear so the user can see a company logo and progress bar as they run the application. Is there any way to change the child frame's properties that would prevent the title bar from showing up? The goal is to have an wxFrame with a transparent background so the company logo can show through. I want to use the wxMDIChildFrame so the user can still resize the window and have a title bar. Thanks!

A: A similar question was already answered in this thread: How do I make a window background transparent in wxWidgets? In short: The wxFrameHint has a hintString argument which you can use to make sure that a frame with a specific hint string is used for the wxFrame. You can, therefore, create a wxFrame with the hint string: `wxFrame *myFrame = new wxFrame(this, wxT("Foo"), wxPoint(0, 0), wxSize(100, 100), 09e8f5149f`
