Available from the collection of the National Library of Australia. Sir Roger Oliver theorized that the earth was in constant motion (as opposed to the solid material substance of the planets) and that the process of transformation described in Mark Twain's text was the result of natural evolution or involution - the gradual decrease in the amount of matter in the galaxy. In his book The Philosophy of Twain, Sir Roger Oliver states that the Galaxy has already gone through several stages of evolution, during which the Stargate has degraded to the current spaceships of the type described by the author. And the path to the stars and worlds of the Earth's civilization was laid between the galaxies by two suns millions of years before the beginning of this planet. 9. Ships of Atlantis At a time when the Earth was small and located close to the galactic core, the entire solar system was developed and inhabited. The time periods between one such cycle and the next resulted in the Solar Empire expanding all the time, and the matter that we today call the Earth gradually evolved until it was in close proximity to the core. Then the worlds in the Earth began to move to higher physical levels (Earth is the smallest planet of the group, which includes five gas giants). Thus, earthly life developed or degraded depending on the cycles between two suns, and the planets of the solar system always followed its law. It is extremely unlikely that, according to Sir Roger Oliver's hypothesis, modern Earth is the same ancient star-planet in which Atlantis was located. Judging by how quickly it went from cold to warm, it becomes clear that it will ignite just as quickly. And the huge impact crater on Mars, which is currently filled with water ice, could have formed as a result of the fact that cracks appeared in the hardest of the planetary shells, and it began to collapse. 10. Alice's World Based on Sir Stephen Hawking's concept of animation, the Earth is possibly a world at a very advanced stage of evolution. One possible theory considers the Earth as a world in which humans are present in the form of computer animation. According to this theory, it is quite simple to explain why people on Earth were the way we are. Why they believed in astrology, divined from runes, prayed to pagan gods and worshiped the spirit
