Configuring an IP enabled network for user verification may be challenging for a network provider. Service providers are currently implementing user verification in network based services. The implementation of a secure network with user verification enables the customers of a network service to access networks and services and register with the service providers while keeping information associated with the network and the associated user confidential. The implementation of a network with user verification may be challenging for the service providers, in particular if a large number of mobile subscribers register with the service provider. The service providers may not be able to verify and authenticate the identity of the subscribers, which may make the service providers non-compliant with the government regulations in some countries.
