There's an ugly way to achieve this, using an OR (||) condition (in a transaction), but I am looking for a cleaner approach - one that does not require another query. A: No, there's no way to limit the table name in queries. You'll have to execute a second query to get the results of the first one. A: No, there's no way to limit the table name in queries. Turn-based combat in which the player takes control of either a cleric or a sorcerer. Two actions per turn for these characters. Action Points determine how many actions you can take during a turn. Each character has a predetermined number of points available at the start of each game, which they may spend as they wish. Rerolling: After taking actions, the player may roll the dice to determine the effects of their actions. The player rolls a die and any modifiers (Abrasions, traps, etc.) are applied to the roll. If a 'success' is rolled, that action succeeds, otherwise the action fails. If the character has any Reroll

Points remaining, the player can reroll these. You can use a Skill to influence the outcome of an action. Each Skill has a number of 'skill levels', which you can increase by training, purchase, or research. Different Skills can have different effects at different skill levels. Each Skill also has a 'rank', or points in which you can spend to improve the Skill's effect. You can also use a Stamina Point to influence the outcome of an action, and you are always allowed one Stamina Point at the beginning of each turn. Stamina Points are replenished when you are not fighting. Depending on your character's starting Stamina, you may not be able to take more than a few additional actions in a row before your Stamina is depleted. When you are under attack, you have one Stamina Point at your disposal, and you may use it to guard your character against damage for that action. When a character takes damage, they may choose to use one of their Stamina Points to use a Skill or to rest. Skills allow you to use some of your Stamina Points without using an action, and so you may use Stamina Points to aid in defending yourself. If a character takes damage while resting, they lose a Stamina Point. You have a limited amount of Stamina Points available for each round of combat. 1 action Points per action Action Points 6 6 Rerolling Points: When you reroll, you can allocate a number of reroll points to each of your characters. If you allocate all your reroll points to one character, the other characters will not be able to reroll their dice. Any dice they roll will be rerolled as normal. If you allocate all your reroll points to the character that had the most success with their

RPG Maker MZ - Darkest Hour is a role-playing video game for the Sega Genesis and Super Nintendo Entertainment System platforms, based on the visual novel Dark Hour by Sukhibhash. The game was never released on the Nintendo 64 platform. Plot The year is 2015, and the majority of the Earth's ecotecture has been destroyed due to an atomic reactor and energy reactor fusion war. The United Nations (UN) escaped the catastrophe, but the nation of NEA (New Earth Alliance) is now an ecological wasteland, with most of the population moving to a more protected region called SEA (Southeast Asia) and NEH (North-Eastern Honshu). The NEA government officially vanished without warning and the general population left the old city. Working for money is not allowed, as people are under the rule of the tyrant ruler Azim. He begins violating people's liberties and uses a mobile network to spy on people and extort them for taxes. Consequently, people from SEA have no other choice than to leave the city. As the country began to sink into a downward spiral, the new capital, Celadon City, suffered a large outbreak of crime. The only way people can survive is to make money illegally and participate in the underground economy by taking part in "sham crimes". If in the end they get arrested by the police or killed trying to remain unscathed, they simply migrate to another city. Mia, an affluent fourteen-year-old girl, is forced to leave her father, and her family leaves Celadon City. She travels all the way to the town of Stove (originally, Melt-Cure). This place is protected by monks who try to "purify the souls of the world". Mia goes to the city's black market and meets the very thieves she helped to make money, and thus managed to have a new life and a "better" street background. There also lives a small business man and martial artist named Noah. He also had his family murdered by a drug dealer known as the "Chastity Killer". Moved by Noah's strength, Mia offers him a "soft job", that instead of helping him to defeat the Chastity Killer, he has to keep watch for the assassin's stilettos. After a while, Noah develops a crush on Mia. The stiletto begins to chase Mia one night, but Noah is there to stop it, showing gassymangame@gmail.com Myocardial contrast echocardiography in myocardial ischemia: clinical experience with a new contrast agent. Our clinical experience using a new contrast agent for myocardial contrast echocardiography (MCE) is described. In a retrospective study, we assessed MCE data of 25 patients with myocardial ischemia and angiographically documented coronary artery disease (CAD). We evaluated the time-intensity curve (TIC) to measure the wash-in and wash-out rates during contrast administration. The wash-in rate ranged from 0.22 to 0.84 ml/s (mean +/- SD: 0.40 +/- 0.21) and the wash-out rate ranged from -0.2 to -0.64 ml/s (mean +/- SD: -0.39 +/- 0.26). In patients without CAD, the wash-in and wash-out rates were significantly lower than in patients with CAD (p
