The statement of ambition really didn't surprise me at all - how could it? I suppose it is just a little sad to see a project so long in development not just receive a proper developer-to-player developer-to-player E3 2013 announcement (and then 5 days later be given away on Origin), but also receive a massive price cut. "Aiming to remain at the forefront of game graphics development, Ubisoft Massive has devoted all its efforts over the past few years to really pushing graphic fidelity to the next level, to create a world teeming with life and detail in which players can interact and experience the vast, world-changing world Ubisoft Massive is creating in meticulous detail. "The last two years have been spent on immersing the player in the world of The Division. We're passionate about the game and we want players to fall in love with it, experience it, live in it and feel at home in it. Our ambition is to really touch and evoke emotion from players, to make them experience all the details and features we are adding to the world."
