Gameplay - Real-Time Battle System A real-time battle system that promotes cooperative play in which you must explore the map to seek out the most effective strategy. A Real-Time Battle System A "real-time battle system" of Rapid Character Actions (RTA) encourages a "turn-based" battle system, which, while keeping the convenience of a "time-based" battle system, enables the real-time battle system to be turned on or off based on your tastes. The real-time battle system is available and unselectable for battle at any time. When the battle timer is turned on, it is possible to view the countdown time and the result display to know what will happen in the next battle. You can change the Battle Setting, such as the changes in the countdown time and result display. RTA Real-time battle system allows the results of the actions taken in previous turns to affect the current turn. Three Battle Settings are available. Battle Settings A: The results are displayed without a countdown. The results are displayed even when you press the button to skip the next battle. Battle Settings B: The results are displayed without a countdown, and the countdown time is displayed. Battle Settings C: The results are displayed without a countdown, and the countdown time and result display are displayed. Description: What a day it was. Rounded up by classmates, forced to ride on a bus, and plopped on the train, we were taken to the faraway palace at this late hour. Yet, for a moment, we were carefree. We felt as though we were living in a fantasy world once again, playing around with friends, and getting along. Starting tomorrow, we will live with a new hierarchy. The new family, the new home. And now, after a brief moment of freedom, we're taken away from the crowded streets and stuffed into the classroom. Just when we thought we were headed for a peaceful school life... It's been revealed that such a "peaceful" school is a real den of iniquity. They say the "old-school" attributes of nobility have faded. They say the promise of the king has been betrayed and the fate of the world determined by the power of the elders. Hordes of violent and craven creatures hide themselves all over the school grounds. They will prey on your weak body to spread chaos upon the world. Plus, the time has come. The moment has arrived. The new family's here to spend an entire school year with us... The time has come. Elder Scroll / Elder Scroll Skyrim 10MB
