PhilippineÂ .From call it a halo. Incredible on-ice result for Seattle as they not only beat the Ducks 4-1 but, most importantly, they did it in front of the national media. The win puts the KooKoo behind only the Wild and Kings in the Pacific. But, it was more than the actual result, it was the circumstances that made this game so special. The Ducks have been awful for awhile now, losing more than they have ever won in a post season. The Metro Ballpark has been horrible for the Ducks over the years with some very underwhelming performances. But, tonight was different, this was one of those must see hockey games, a game that just showed the growth of a young, yet very talented team. Let's take a look at the game, starting with the penalty shot where Matt Beleskey took advantage of a perfect setup by Aaron Volpatti. The Ducks let Beleskey down in the first round of the playoffs with all three of his attempts in Game 6 against the Blackhawks. It was clear in the first round the Ducks didn't really understand how to punish a forward in a shootout or simply ice the puck. They played 2-on-1 in the circle, the guy with the puck, and the other guy standing still. This was fine against slow, stop-start-ed Blues in the first round, but once you get some speed down the ice the Ducks have to use those smaller players, not pinching and hedging, to punish the puck-carrier. But, the Ducks didn't even have to punish Beleskey, just skate around him and the puck would find the net. This didn't happen again against the Ducks, the Ducks bullied Beleskey into doing what they wanted, but what a way to see the kid make the most of a great setup. On that same power play, the Ducks got out-muscled in front of net and the puck
