I tried to enable Firebase Cloud Messaging in my app with the GCM(Google Cloud Messaging) version 3.0.3, but I met the following problems. Problem 1: FCM has no effect on logcat. I turned on the logcat without FCM but the app can still work normally. Problem 2: FCM increases the memory usage. After enabling FCM, the app's memory usage suddenly rises. I am really confused whether I just get a simple GCM or FCM in the beginning. Is FCM possible to turn off from the service configuration after I turned on it? A: Firebase Cloud Messaging is not GCM. It is a Google service that is much simpler than GCM. You will most likely still need to use a Google service. This means you might need to use something like Firebase Cloud Messaging. However, it is possible to turn off FCM during testing. From the FCM documentation: Firebase Console / Developer Dashboard Go to a Firebase project in the console Select the settings icon () in the top right corner Select APIS & auth from the menu Select Cloud Messaging from the settings panel Enable or disable Firebase Cloud Messaging You should then be able to test this out while it's disabled. To avoid injury or worse, the player is required to shake-off the discomfort and proceed with the play. In a game such as soccer, if the player attempts to shake-off an opponent's kick, sometimes the ball is deflected into a part of the player's body. The deflected ball can hurt the player, cause serious injury, and can result in injury for the opposing team. This is especially true if the ball carries momentum at the point of contact with the player. In order to prevent this dangerous occurrence, often players wear a helmet and other protective equipment. However, such protective equipment can become cumbersome and can hinder the player's mobility. Therefore, a player's ability to shake-off the impact of an opponent's kick or other contact with the player's body can be hampered because of the protective equipment. To keep the player safe and to avoid causing injury to the player, two proposals have been made for improving a player's ability to shake-off an opponent's contact with the player's body. Both of these proposals are directed to
