Basic Interface Photoshop uses a minimalistic, flat design, unlike many other programs. The software automatically updates as you add things like layers or a brush, and it can be accessed from multiple windows. Windows can be organized through the General tab and the View Tab. The tabs are used to organize the window itself and its content. To use Photoshop, you need to set up your preferences. These options include your name, user preferences, and spell check. You can also choose which preferences will be saved when you close the program. The settings page includes other options for setting file format and preferences for Photoshop Elements. You can add new layers to your photo to create new depth. The Layers panel is where you create and edit the photos that you will use in your design. It has two main features: the Layers panel and the History panel. The Layers Panel is where all of the layers will be created or modified. Layers can be added directly to a photo or added to a layer in the Layers panel. You can also use two-sided transparency, which gives multiple layers in a file the same layer settings, making it easier to see and edit the various layers. WASHINGTON (Reuters) - A U.S. prosecutor said on Friday the FBI has interviewed two people close to Donald Trump about alleged payments made to former Miss Universe Alicia Machado, after initially saying the agency was investigating the Republican nominee for any connections to possible Russian government hacking. U.S. Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton listens as she speaks to reporters after casting her vote in the U.S. presidential election in Chappaqua, New York, U.S. November 8, 2016. REUTERS/Brian Snyder Trump has denied wrongdoing and has accused the Democratic candidate, former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, of choosing Machado as a way to attack him for comments he made about Machado's weight and beauty. Clinton and Democrats accuse Trump of having improper links to Russia, an accusation he has also denied. Earlier on Friday, the Democratic National Committee said it was concerned by FBI inquiries into the matter. "We are deeply concerned that Trump's pick for FBI Director, and the White House's denial of these inquiries and contacts cast grave doubt over the independence of law enforcement in our election," the DNC said in a statement. The FBI had previously said it was looking into the matter after Trump, in September, said on the debate stage with Clinton that Machado had acted "unattractively" when she weighed 130 pounds during the pageant's 1997 competition. Since then, the unseemly and unexpected storyline has become a big focus of the presidential contest. Machado, who Trump called a "disaster" for the U.S. pageant circuit, sued Trump and pageant owner Donald Trump for using her weight as an "aggravating factor" in the 1996 lawsuit she brought against her former employer. The suit was settled in 1999 for an undisclosed amount. The Trump campaign, in a statement earlier on Friday, said the FBI has interviewed two people. "The campaign welcomes and expects this inquiry into these matters," said a statement from spokeswoman Hope Hicks. The FBI and the Department of Justice did not respond to requests for comment on Friday. Accusations by Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton and her campaign that Russian hacking was behind the release of embarrassing emails from her opponent, Republican Donald Trump, has raised new questions about ties between Trump and the Russian government. FBI Director James Comey told the House intelligence committee on Thursday
