How to keep it real, bro. I've done a lot of research on this, and I have to be honest... even most of the games that have porn scenes in them (Natsume Yujincho, R-18, Manaria Friends) still lack in the areas that make porn so great. The best out of them in both categories are BTO and Shiki. While I do enjoy the latter more because it's a visual novel with a ton of wonderful characters, it's also probably the weirdest one I've seen yet. And then there's the other part, which is that not all porn is great. At least, not the kind I can think of. I've watched a lot of porn. A lot. I'll readily admit that. My girlfriend does it, so I've seen more. I remember one of my earliest experiences being that of a friend of mine explaining the concept of "super heavy women" to me. It was really charming at the time because I was 13 and thought about asking her to sleep with me. But even then, I wasn't that into that kind of stuff. Later on, I picked up the habit again and watched "Japanese" versions of porn videos. I also tried a small sample. It didn't really work for me. Then I heard about Lovehoney. I felt that there was a weird stigma around it. "Is it true? Am I a masochist because I watch this?" I think that was when I first remember thinking that I really don't like it. Up until then, my fantasies were pretty tame. The only dominant "active" part I could think of was pretending to be a character from an anime/manga or something like that. Or maybe kissing one of my female friends. In those days, my mind was pretty well-blocked off from my senses, so I wasn't used to it. After moving to Australia, I missed a lot of my past. I realized that if I watch a normal porn now, it feels gross. Everything before felt like very well-executed masturbation sessions, but this one doesn't. It's like a real woman is just standing there and I'm doing stuff to her. But I didn't want to go like that because I didn't want to admit it. So, I'd watch things like "How to Make a Woman Quiver" and other stuff. So, when I moved to Japan, I
