A systematic investigation of factors affecting the derivatization of azo dyes in fish tissues, using variable solvent composition for ultrasonic-assisted extraction. The derivatization process of azo dyes in fish tissues was systematically investigated using a common solvent [methanol-2-propanol-HCl mixture (80:10:10, v/v)] for ultrasonic-assisted extraction. The factors including types of dyes, organic solvents, extraction time, sonication time and temperature were examined and optimized. The main factors affecting the derivatization yield were the types of organic solvents, extraction time and sonication time. The optimal conditions were as follows: the concentration of NaCl in the extraction solvent was 0.65% (w/v), the extraction time was 60 min and the sonication time was 8 min. The average derivatization yields for 15 types of dyes studied using this optimal condition were 61.0% on an average. Although this condition was not suitable for all types of dyes, the derivatization conditions could be useful for the practical utilization of azo dyes in fish tissues.BCL11B B-cell CLL/lymphoma 11B is a protein that in humans is encoded by the BCL11B gene. Function This gene is a member of the MECOM family, and encodes a zinc finger transcription factor. The encoded protein forms a complex with MYBL2 and synergistically represses transcription. This protein has been shown to inhibit CD19-mediated B cell differentiation through the direct repression of MYB and other B cell-specific genes. Alternate transcriptional splice variants have been characterized. Interactions BCL11B has been shown to interact with: CREB1, EP300, MYBL2, Nuclear receptor coactivator complex Nuclear receptor coactivator 1, and TWIST1. Clinical significance

Using specific monoclonal antibodies (MAbs) in conjunction with flow cytometric techniques, we have identified subsets of tumor cells which share phenotypic traits. These cells are of the same cell lineage as the original tumor, but may also bear certain markers not present in the original tumor. The cells which can be stained by a given MAbs are called MAbs positive and bear the activity of that MAb. The phenotype of the tumor may change following treatment with therapies which are not selective, which may alter the tumor cell population and even destroy some of the tumor cell bearing the phenotype. The ability to detect and identify subsets of tumor cells with a given phenotype may be of significant value to the understanding of the induction and growth of malignant gliomas as well as the response of the tumor to chemotherapeutic agents and immunotherapeutic treatments.Q: Why can't I index with a lambda using Numpy?
