I'm using SQL Server 2000. I use a sequence for a column in my table with the following definition: CREATE SEQUENCE SequenceName START WITH 1000 INCREMENT BY 100 MINVALUE 1000 MAXVALUE 9999999

CACHE 20; The sequence value is normally generated when I insert a new row in the table. When I insert a new row, I would like the sequence to start with 10000, and to be able to set this value. How can I set the current seed value for a normally generated sequence? Thanks

A: This is not quite the same question as it is actually in 2008, but it might help others.

A: To reset the seed value of a sequence, use: `SET SEED INTERVAL_ID` where `INTERVAL_ID` is the sequence ID of the sequence you want to reset. Example:

-- reset seeding of column col from sequence seq SET SEED
INTERVAL_ID(seq)

A: When using a sequence, you can initialize it after your `INSERT` statement by adding `START WITH...` syntax

CREATE SEQUENCE SequenceName START

WITH 10000 INCREMENT BY 100
MINVALUE 1000 MAXVALUE 9999999
CACHE 20; Then run this on your Sql
Server Management Console.
