StarCommander VR: Battle on Mars - A must-have shooter in VR! I've been extremely interested in this genre of games for quite some time, and was excited to see more of this product released in the near future. We've seen a lot of the arcade game based on Hollywood films come and go, and while I'm disappointed at the current state of the big-budget movie based VR games, the unique brand of Star Commander adds a lot to the genre. I had a fantastic time with the public beta, and I'm excited to see what the full game is like. So, what does this game have to offer? For starters, the game offers two classes, a Soldier class with the standard 6 weapons, and a TEC class. There are also two multiplayer modes, these are: Space Attack - This is a 1v1 multiplayer, and allows the player to customize their character using a special abilities mechanic, similar to Fireteam Raven's shooter. These include "Rockets", which shoot homing missiles at enemies, and "Thrusters", which power up the player character for area-of-effect attacks. You can also customize the color schemes for the character as well as the weapon over the multiplayer lobby. Capture The Flag - This mode allows you and a partner to fight against a random host team of players. There are multiple map sizes as well as the ability to configure maps to have specific layouts, as well as the ability to have any map with a 1v1 or 2v2 map mode. Additionally, there is a single-player mode called "Beachhead", which is a brand new game type to the genre. Beachhead is a vertical shooter with physics, and is meant to be played with a

Vive or a few friends on your couch. You have a time limit to get through and make sure that you can make it to the next checkpoint, doing this will open up areas as you fight through a maze-like environment. You
