Q: how to keep the returned data from one function in global variable? I want to return the data by using one function in other i.e main.js: `function test(){ var val="value here"; return val; } document.write(test());` but i am getting Uncaught ReferenceError: test is not defined A: you can't return the value to global (its a function) like a variable. you need to define a variable which has the value of the returned value. then you can access that variable in main.js. main.js: `var str = test(); document.write(str);` or you can return a promise and use the returned value outside the function. Q: Adding rows in a DataGridView with button click I have this code, where I want to add new row to a DataGridView when I click on a button on Form. `private void`
