The family of a University of Denver student accused of killing a stranger while texting and driving in July has started an online fundraiser to pay for a "K-9 Extortion Task Force" to prevent similar incidents from happening in the future. "I'm committed to see the end of texting and driving. It's an epidemic. Every family in our community has a family member that's been impacted by this tragic incident," Donna Glisan, the mother of the accused driver, told ABC News. "The thought of this happening to anyone else is absolutely heartbreaking. This is about her life and the lives that are going to be impacted as a result of her behavior." Related: What Exactly Is 'Texting and Driving'? Glisan's son, Frankie, 20, was sentenced to 30 days in jail in August after pleading no contest to careless driving causing the death of Darwin Soto, 29, a freshman in engineering at the university. The 18-year-old was stopped by police in Thornton, Colo., after he left the scene of a collision in which an SUV was crushed by an 18-wheeler. Frankie told police that he was texting on his phone just before the collision. The Denver Police Department has the authority to use the "K-9 Extortion Task Force" to prevent similar tragedies from happening in the future. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, a driver who is distracted by a cell phone is 16 times more likely to cause a fatal accident than a distracted driver who is not using a cellphone. Frankie was still driving on a suspended license after he was charged in September. "Texting and driving has got to stop. The fact that he has a head injury doesn't matter," Glisan said. "There needs to be consequences. I don't want someone else to go through this." According to the Denver Post, the task force was created in response to a rise in fatal car accidents that involved distracted drivers in 2009. The task force, funded by the city, will deploy four to six police officers who "work in unmarked cars and look out for distracted drivers." The officer on duty in a cell phone-involved accident "has no authority to place a suspect in the back of a patrol car. That authority is reserved for an off-duty officer or a police dog," The Denver Post reported. Related: Your Cellphone Is Making You Fat — How to Fix
