* For organizing your images: * Organizing Images and Libraries * Photoshop Layers * Changing the Position of Images * Changing the Size of Images * For retouching, cropping, and enhancing your images: * Cropping Images * Retouching Images * Enhancing Images Images that have been altered using Photoshop can be used in other applications. Depending on how you've created and modified the images, they can be used for editing and enhancement in other software, too. This chapter covers the basics of Photoshop that you need to know in order to begin creating images. This includes the fundamentals of a basic file structure, understanding the difference between RGB and CMYK color, and how to use the tools that Photoshop offers to manipulate and enhance your images. ## Exploring the Layers The Layers panel allows you to save images as a stack of layers so that you can adjust and enhance your image without affecting the original. All the layers in a file are stacked on top of each other, and you can use any combination of layers to edit an image. The Layers panel (Figure 2.1) provides a visual representation of your image, and the layers from which you can create objects that you want to appear in your image. * On top of the original image is the Background layer, which is always transparent. * Layer 0 is used when you create a new file; all subsequent layers are then named layer 1, 2, and so on. * The bottommost layer is the last layer you create and is named layer 1. * You can edit any of the layers individually or bring a selection to any layer for editing.

7 Nov Chicago White Sox Mock Draft | SBNation.com With the season winding down, I'm going to take a swing at a fun mock draft each week. This one on the White Sox front is fun, because we have an incredibly shallow draft. If you look at the depth chart for a number of positions on this team, there isn't a lot of excitement. This pick may not be exciting, but the White Sox have to do something with their six picks and this scenario is a fun way to do it. The White Sox take J.T. Realmuto at pick No. 28 and that's the draft.

Correlation between total and soluble Fas and Fas ligand levels and cellular proliferation in cervical lesions. Cervical cancer is the second most common cancer in women and is the primary cause of death from a cancer in women. This study aims to investigate whether there is a correlation between concentrations of total and soluble Fas and Fas ligand and cellular proliferation in cervical precancerous lesions and invasive cervical carcinomas. Sixty samples were collected from patients who were preoperatively diagnosed as having cervical squamous intraepithelial lesions (SIL), cervical invasive carcinoma (cIN) or cervical intraepithelial neoplasia (CIN) II-III. Concentrations of total Fas and Fas ligand, proliferation marker, Ki-67 (a cellular proliferation marker), total protein and haemoglobin were analysed. The mean age of patients was 42.8. The mean value of total Fas in normal cells was 6.5. The total Fas concentrations in pre-cancerous lesions were found to be significantly lower than in normal cells. With the exception of CIN II-III, total Fas concentrations were significantly lower in the cervical SIL and cIN groups than in the normal group (p
