In this article we'll look at the basic steps to creating a simple Photoshop document using a Windows 10 machine. How to Create a Photoshop Document The Photoshop CS6 version of Photoshop's user interface allows anyone to make a simple Photoshop document. However, for our purposes here, we'll need to explore the basic Photoshop Document steps in Photoshop CS5. The interface is different with Photoshop CC, but creating a document is pretty much the same, just with some more to do. The first step is to make a New Document in Photoshop. This is also a good way to explore other features within Photoshop and to keep your work safe and clean. The next step is to name the document. Most people name it something unique that describes its content and purpose (ie: Photo Album) as seen in the image below. If you're creating a photo album, you'll want to be able to tell which page is which. The next step is to make sure the document is set to CMYK (cyan, magenta, yellow, and key or black), which is the color model used by printing presses. There is also a "treat as RGB" option in the Colors panel at the top of the screen. This will convert the image to RGB (red, green, blue) and then make the black color the white color in the editing process. The next step is to make an empty layer on top of the document. This will allow us to place all our different layers on top of each other in Photoshop, and it will also keep things from becoming messy. You can make the new empty layer any color you like, but there is another item at the top of the Layers panel called "Stencil Mask." When an item is selected in the Layers panel, the "Stencil Mask" button will change to a "+" which will allow you to add an item to the "Stencil Mask." The "Stencil Mask" will let you create specific colors for those specific items that you select. With the new "Stencil Mask," you'll select the Black flag in the Layers panel as seen in the image below. Now, you can go ahead and click on the "-" button (which is now white) to deselect the items in the layers panel. This will make the "Stencil Mask"

Image credit: Intel Corporation The Laptop Death Spiral is well underway. Here's a 2015 laptop sales chart from IDC showing the top 10 models of laptops sold in March 2015 (source). Windows laptops in the top 10 include the Asus Zenbook UX303UA (note the Shuttle WinBooks are not included), which was the #3 spot last month; HP Spectre 13, up to the #5 spot; the Windows 8.1 Device Cover, a "keyboard" that hooks onto the back of your tablet and turns it into a full-fledged Windows 8.1 device that is available for $99, which will likely sell well if the rumors of a Microsoft Surface Pro 3 tablet are true; and the Windows 10 device cover, which is also for $99, and is a full Windows 10 device that is rumored to be coming out at some point. The article in PC Magazine's review begins: "It's easy to get caught up in all of the excitement surrounding a new operating system, especially when that operating system is Windows. Unfortunately, some of the enthusiasm for Windows 10 is well-deserved, while other aspects of the OS leave much to be desired. For most users, Windows 10 won't be that bad, but there are a few key issues that cause trouble for Windows owners." Apparently, the article was poorly written because the following heading is at the end of the review: "The problem is that Microsoft's Windows 10 is a bit of a mess, and whether you download the free upgrade or purchase the $150-per-year Home or Pro editions from the Windows Store, your PC may become its own worst enemy." The PC Guide's review begins: "The full version of Windows 10 on the Surface Pro 3 may indeed be great for users, but it's not what we think of as a tablet. It's more than a tablet OS, and that's because it's so highly functional. And that's not what we're excited about. What we're excited about is the whole package. It's very functional, and it's great to use." The PC Guide also notes: "We can't actually recommend the Surface Pro 3 with Windows 10 for most folks right now, but we did say that it's great to use, and it's certainly better for some users than their current computers. It's more than a

I have a function, returning a string, which I've decided to use to display a text. Now the problem is that the longer the string, the slower the function becomes. Measuring the time for 1000 input numbers, I can say that this is true and at most numbers. Here is an example: #include <size_t find_first_long>(const char* string, size_t length) { char* p = (char*)string; size_t i = 0; size_t n = length; while(i
