THE FEELS OF THE LAND BETWEEN The feeling that I was wholly separate from the ground is something I have known for a long time. * From the countless hours of training to become a strong swordswoman, it was the experience that I realised just how fragile I was. * The anxiety I felt then, as the ground moved—which had no actual effect on my body—was a feeling that was similar to the feeling of being taunted by a strong being or the taunts of a

What's new:

Update: I really had no idea that I would need to use the `.bashrc` file to make the changes to my CRON environment variables. All I needed to do was to use the `export` to save the environment variables. A: Here's a short answer for anyone who came here wanting to add a `PATH` to their `.bashrc`: Go to your home directory and create a file called `.bashrc` In that file, add the following lines. Then exit and open a new terminal session to check `PATH` is properly set: `CURRENT_PATH=`pwd``
`PATH=${CURRENT_PATH}:/home/username/the/path/you/want`
A: Normally, I'm not all that into cron jobs. But as both other answers say, this is a question that comes up pretty often on the net and is probably answered some where on the web. It helps to, at the same time, establish a tutorial. I created a cron job to log a given message to the screen every 5 minutes: `$ cat /etc/cron.hourly/log.sh #!/bin/bash time="$(date +%H:%M)" trap 'echo "message at $(date +%H:%M)" >> /home/myself/log.txt' DEBUG echo "message at $(date +%H:%M)" >> /home/myself/log.txt` The line `echo "message at $(date +%H:%M)" >> /home/myself/log.txt` makes the message appear in the `/home/myself/log.txt` file every 5 minutes, and the line `trap 'echo "message at $(date +%H:%M)" >> /home/myself/log.txt' DEBUG` makes the job run in `DEBUG` mode, and emit a message every time it's run in `DEBUG` mode (i.e. every 5 minutes). RUNNING `$ crontab -l $ cat /etc/cron.hourly/log.sh 30 10 * * * echo "message at 10:00" >> /home/myself/log.txt 30 15 * * * echo "message at 15:00" >> /home/myself/log.txt 31 10`
