For the first time ever, two former Vice presidents have been named co-chairs for the important 2018 University of Virginia conference dedicated to helping CIPA members address the issues that face diversity, inclusion, and other aspects of mental health. CIPA is one of the nation's top research and advocacy organizations on mental health disparities and gender identity issues, which are factors that contribute to the suicide rate among LGBT people. The conference will be held Oct. 27-29 in Charlottesville, VA, where former Vice Presidents John Hickenlooper, the noted Colorado Democrat and former Governor, and Joe Biden, the Delaware Senator and former Vice President, will join scientists and policy makers to discuss cutting-edge research and to set an agenda for the next five years in the field. "CIPA has made great progress in educating policy makers and mental health providers about mental health issues and mental health needs among LGBT people," said Dr. Lavani Luzuriaga, who recently stepped down as the organization's executive director to lead a state mental health department in Colorado. "We are honored to have John and Joe join our conference as we highlight the many research and advocacy accomplishments in the last year and
