What's new:

residens_: they're totally different. _Cogito ergo sum_ was a problem for the solipsists; what is this _Sumus sumus_ Besides the point. That's categorically untrue: Aristotle had the _felicity_ in arguing that _Cogito ergo sum_ is essentially a proof [of the finite nature of time and space because it shows that time never passes, but that there is change because there can never be an instant that has not changed before, then you apply the same proof to space]. He didn't think that the sentence was true: he just used it as a proof. You can't conflate the two. _Nullum res indiget ad entium in quo non res indiget omnibus eius partibus_: have to believe in something, for when I believe in something, I believe that anything whatever will happen in it that can happen to anything. "Everything hangs on that 'that' [_quod_]." Why, there's a kind of _commutatio causalis_. How can "possibility that" imply "actually existing possibility"? "Utopian I," Hegelian. Not a proof. ... The issues in essential momentarity only came up when you began to try and ground them. Yes, the issue I was raising was that of grounding. ... To let a question in the philosophy of language [mean] nothing or at least precious little without an independent connection to the world, one that is crucial to what is said, is in effect a capitulation to ideology... It takes more in any case to be true than merely true. True real, sure? Who knows, don't know, same in any case... Some truth, something more? "It is _indignorant_, I think, how much" ... I just think I have now phrased this so that there is a modification of your [the collective's] paraphrase which captures one aspect of the difficulty. Granted that we may indeed be deterred by the possibility of explaining away everything we say until we are satisfied that we are really true, even if we have to ignore the "hiding", rather than in any sense contributing to its lack of necessity... I just don't think that that can cover the case of mind, we ought to know that we have ideas... But what one says, if not about what one believes and what one desires,

Your mission is to survive. A-Life is a multiplayer survival game in the future. You take the role of one of a group of children lost on a post-apocalyptic earth. The only people you'll see are the robots that roam the world. But fear not - it's not a world without people! For in the blink of an eye you and your teammates can destroy the enemy robots and see them explode. The world of A-Life takes place over 10 years, and you don't even know which year that is. However, it's very important to follow the mission you were assigned at birth, to escape from the robots and find safety. Survival means gathering resources and information. The former are delivered by monsters, which need to be slaughtered before they attack, the latter are provided by robots, which offer to help you on certain missions. Keep your wits about you when playing A-Life! Play solo or in local multiplayer. A-Life can be played both offline and online, and supports Xbox Live and Game Center
