Licensing I am not an expert in licensing, I cannot provide you an expert answer for that. But I can offer some possibilities of how to resolve this. I'll start with what I know, and then try to dig out more for you. I was in a similar situation as you are. I just had 2 free trial licenses and was getting in trouble because I couldn't activate the second trial. The way I got through it, is that I created an account at Autodesk. Then I created a product in my account (same Autodesk account). Then I created a license to this product. Then I installed my trial licenses on the product in my account. When the trial was done, I selected this license in the license section and removed the trial license from the trial products. Then I just added the license to my trial product. This is the only way I got to activate the product. I can't tell you if this is correct or not, but I hope it helps you. I still don't know how to get this done without a paid subscription. For this I would need to go to the Autodesk forums. Good Luck! Janis You must be a registered user to add a comment. If you've already registered, sign in. Otherwise, register and sign in. Do you have a paid subscription for Autodesk? If so, what is your subscription package? If not, what do you need a paid subscription for? If you don't need a paid subscription, then you can probably send Autodesk a support request explaining what the issue is. You could also ask a question here at SO, but I doubt there are enough Autodesk users on the site to get a good answer. If you need an Autodesk paid subscription, try Autodesk's subscription support (trial and paid) site. Hello (this is an answer from @janis), You should be able to enter your codes and register from the online service on Autodesk. The trial code can be entered there, and you just have to follow the activation instructions, it's ok. You
