Neurodevelopmental outcome in preterm and term infants with severe neonatal jaundice: a randomized controlled study. To determine the effect of transient neonatal hyperbilirubinaemia on neurodevelopmental outcome of term infants at 18 months of age. This study was a prospective, controlled, randomised trial with two parallel groups of infants. Two hundred and sixteen full-term infants with birthweight of 2800 g or more were assigned to two groups as follows. Group I received either no treatment or exchange transfusion if necessary, and group II received phototherapy for jaundice. The infants were seen at 3, 6 and 12 months of age for neurodevelopmental evaluation. The infants in group II had significantly higher total serum bilirubin levels compared with those in group I at birth (26.5+/-0.4 vs 21.6+/-0.3 mg/dL, respectively) and at 3 months of age (23.8+/-0.4 vs 22.4+/-0.3 mg/dL, respectively). The difference in TSB values between the two groups were significant at 3 months of age (p=0.002) but not at 6 or 12 months of age (p>0.05). There was no significant difference in neurodevelopmental outcome between the two groups at 6 and 12 months of age. Transient neonatal hyperbilirubinaemia does not adversely affect neurodevelopmental outcome at 18 months 6d1f23a050
