Willow (Special.Q: Chrome Extension Popup Webpage I'm a noob to Chrome Extension development, and I was wondering if it's possible to make a Chrome Extension popup a webpage like this This is a website that displays several images based on the user's timezone. I'm not sure if this is possible because I'm a little confused on where to start. Does anyone know how to implement this? Thanks A: What you might try is the chrome.tabs.executeScript API for populating the page elements with the given parameters. The first argument is the page the content must be injected into, and the second argument is the code you want to execute on that page. A more robust solution would be to run some kind of AJAX request to your own server, which would use the computed timezone and run the correct JS to render the results. It's probably a bit more work though. Q: Add view to viewcontroller with static content - Make more use of Xcode storyboard without having to code from scratch I have a view based app made with xcode storyboard. I am trying to add a "chip" view in which the user can set the date and time every day. Is it possible to insert a ViewController with the time/date that is in Xcode storyboard, with the string "0000-00-00", and then add it to a view that will be added by code to the main viewcontroller? Thank you. A: I don't think you can do this with a storyboard because the design of that screen is not set (the value isn't "0000-00-00"). If that's the case you can create a view controller with a view with the design set to "0000-00-00" and add this view to your view controller. You should be able to use the storyboard to show the date/time, but I don't think the design will be "0000-00-00".
