We are using librestful framework for SOAP in our web app. We did some RESTful API calls on the base web app, but we are now adding some more functions, we are planning to make them restful api, calling another server (not our own). The problem is that there is no easy way to authenticate client, to ensure we are not using api keys within the app. So we are thinking to see how to do this in librestful? I have already done some research but I am still not sure how to do it properly. I would appreciate any idea or hint. A: I'm afraid you need to dive into the source. librestful uses something very similar to the OAuth authorization/authentication scheme. It is implemented in a number of classes, including, e.g. URIGenserver. Search for the OAuthToken class.
