That is such a sinful deed. What we have heard from the other world is that in their childhood Lord Damodara had taken the yogurt that his mother Yashoda was churning into butter and then stolen that butter. Fearing that his mother might have found out what he has done, Sri Damodara ran from the house on a wooden grinding mortar, so that he can steal another butter from his mother Yashoda who was chasing after him with greater speed. Due to the dismay of that sinful deed, Sri Damodara Krishna went to Vishnu's mother Yashoda's abode. At that moment Vishnu's mother Yashoda saw Sri Damodara running from her house on the wooden grinding mortar. She put on her women's garb and disguised as a woman on a wooden grinding mortar

(appearing to be a woman's garb) ran after Sri Damodara. Sri Damodara tried to run away from Yashoda by throwing a pot of yogurt which he had stolen onto Yashoda. Yashoda snatched that pot and dropped it. Thinking that she was about to get punished, Yashoda continued running to catch Sri Damodara. Meanwhile, Krishna's mother Yashoda grabbed the pot with her hand. Slowly, Yashoda's hand was covered with a sticky substance. Holding her hand she called her husband, Kamsa, saying "Oh! Yashoda, why do you get covered with some material?". Yashoda said "Oh Lord, Kamsa, my hand is covered with the butter which I had churned earlier. She immediately held her hand and washed it. Her hand was not covered with butter after she washed it. Yashoda then realized what had happened. She realized that the person fleeing from Yashoda was no other than Krishna. She then returned to her seat and asked her husband "Kamsa, you see, the butter which I had churned earlier has again come to life and come out of my hand; this is a very good omen. There is no doubt that what I have churned is going to come to life. I can see my Lord's divine feet in front of my eyes. Oh! Kamsa, please do not take Krishna away from me."
