We think that will help us in our work. - So be it. - There was no emotion on Lord Clonfer's face, but perhaps he was just being himself. He was a hard and ruthless man when it came to business. - But if there is the slightest assistance on your part in this task, it will be gratefully accepted. - I'm not sure I have time for it. - But you can pretend to be busy. - Yes, but the thing is, I'm never busy. I can't work without a purpose. - Then you must find that purpose." I said. He smiled again: - I know you don't mean any harm. - You are very kind," I said. - I think our conversation has been of great benefit to me. - But we have not finished our coffee. - Don't you want to answer my question? - What question? - About your wife. He shook his head: - I don't know what you want me to say. - But it would be a very good start. - She took his hand. - Don't you want to know what I think of you? - I get the feeling that you're trying to tell me something very important, and I don't understand. Is that so? - Perhaps. - She leaned forward and kissed him. - I love you very much, Richard. And I want you to be my husband. - Are you sure you want that? - Absolutely. - She straightened up and leaned back in her chair. - And I think we can decide together what we're going to do about it. And don't worry, I'm not going to make you do anything embarrassing. - Is that necessary? - I asked, and the thought flashed through my head that I'd been hearing a lot of this kind of talk lately. - No, we just need to know what's on your mind. - She shrugged. - But, you won't tell me what's on your mind, so I don't have to worry. - She leaned across the table and lifted my hand so I could look at my rings. - I saw the way you were looking at her.
