Durchins boss at universal is former president of Chicago, John Murdy. He hired Durchin to work on Barbie as Rapunzel at a small studio within Chicago. She worked diligently on the game for 5 years. Barbie as Rapunzel is an original story created by Disney, Barbie as Rapunzel is a board game that the team designed. Mattel then licensed it.

The team did a lot of work to get Barbie as Rapunzel ready for its release. The team created innovative prototype levels and tested different mechanic and playstyles on each level. They also created many original puzzles and puzzles for the game. The team did a lot of experimentation in this game. First the team had the player carry two items, such as a hair-clip from one level to another. After testing that, the team came up with the idea of a rope. The player then had to grab onto a rope to the next level. Another idea was to have the player see a visual prompt for the move they should make from one level to another. The game would then create unique music and visual effects as the player made each move. However, this system was also dropped. Look, Barbie is a role model. She is inspiring to everyone! I have a poster of barbie in my room growing up. I grew to love her, not because of the way she looks. It's because she's brave, she stands up for herself, she stands up for others. She is an inspiring leader. I just think Barbie as Rapunzel is a good idea, because it makes barbie seem more relatable. It's not just a doll. It can be an inspiration to everyone!

The player can craft their own stories about the characters and make their own adventure for them. And if you're so inclined, you can recreate one of the dialogs that was written when the game was made, like the one between the Prince and Barbie, or the Prince and Fluffy. Cynthia Woll has worked for Disney for several years. Woll's experience as an experienced producer does help in her understanding of Barbie's potential to send mixed messages to young girls. Woll says Mattel is not aware of the issues any media may cause. Again, it goes back to the attitude that Barbie is a toy and not a role model. Lori Day suggests that parents be a part of the solution and approach these companies as to how Barbie can be better portrayed to girls. Day suggests parents build their daughter's media literacy by teaching them how to look at the behind-the-scenes, and behind-the-curtain to these movies and games. (not the same person as these characters, though). Angelina Jolie starred in the first movie in the series, while the following movies were helmed by studio heads of Pixar and Disney. The films lasted from 2001 to 2010, and they were successful for the movie studios and for Mattel.
