When you use the Share feature in Visual Studio Code, you will be asked for the number of recipients and a password. The recipients should be identified as editors, reviewers and approvers for items being shared. When you use the View feature in Visual Studio Code, you will be asked to select either the specific file or the view (always per project). If you are asked to open a specific file, Visual Studio Code opens the selected file in the viewer. If you are asked to create a new view, you will be asked for a name for the view. This is the name you can use for filtering views in the project explorer in Visual Studio. When you use the Open feature in Visual Studio Code, you can either open existing files, or create new ones. When you open existing files, you will be asked for the name of the project and a file name.
