last weekend's leader, dumplin', dropped 46% in its second weekend in box office, which is a straight line to desperation with its $13.5m cume. Disney's Black Panther, from Marvel, will continue to hold its crown. It's currently at $673.7m and will probably pass Avengers: Endgame on Wednesday night. Last of the certified A+ hits was Sony's Rocky spinoff, Creed II (Voltage / STX Entertainment), which received an A+. With that in mind, the studio was undoubtedly pleased to announce that opening weekend was one of the best for a Rocky movie since Creed in 2007. With $21.3 million, it's the highest opening weekend for any Rocky film since Creed II and the biggest opening weekend ever for an October release. So, what's the next move for Creed II? The box office tells us. The second weekend brought in an estimated $16.5 million, so roughly one third of what the first round did. It currently has a running total of $62 million, with a final domestic box office of $85.8 million. It will more than likely expand to wide release next week. The studio also reported that Creed II was the 13th highest grossing film of the weekend bringing in an estimated $11.5 million. This has landed in the second spot behind Game Night. Additionally, the film is now in the top three highest grossing horror films of all time, behind A Quiet Place and Halloween. It could be the first of many Rocky hits, we can't wait to see. The film's estimated has received another boost with the real time tracking of a major re-release in the fourth quarter. This means there's a good chance they can hit over $100 million. with this, the film also has another stab at the record for highest grossing sound of music remake and could fall just short of the original's $116 million. obviously sony, you are correct, this is going to be a great year for your studio.

sony movies in the mcu will increasingly be going after male-skewing, older audiences, and with that comes a cinemascore that is getting less favorable. spider-man is in a category with spider-man: homecoming in that it has a b- cinemascore; venom has a b-, and venom: let there be carnage a b-. in comparison, movies with positive or strong running reviews, like star wars: the last jedi, sank to a b+; its sequel the last jedi fell to b-; jurassic world fell to b+ and guardians of the galaxy fell to b-. sony is giving away four new trailers on sunday: mowgli fury, spider-man: into the spider-verse and godzilla: king of monsters alongside the release of it and knives out. normally those four would have made up for the two-day pocahontasslam, but that movie may get to disney in three days as the studio is competing with the four-day thanksgiving holiday for family moviegoers. elle was still moving in the right direction despite an "f" cinemascore. the anne hathaway-starrer for focus features should get to $20m through sunday, with females copping $8m-$9m. the movie, which cost over $26m, cost $20m to make. the studio will be hoping for the same result for the space between us from fox searchlight, which cost $31m and made $9.8m last weekend. fox searchlight has a great relationship with hathaway, however, and she still has the power to generate oscar heat with some really strong work. the gotham awards at the academy of motion picture arts & sciences received about three hours of coverage in the trades, as they didn't mention that rocketman won the award for best musical. it can be assumed he won, despite speculation of the last couple weeks that it might be hamilton. 5ec8ef588b
