"A two-engine 60-ton type P&LF crane has now been successfully deployed, with two sets of legs, to top-out the new transparent glass VIP-3400 chemical cracking and petrochemicals processing lab at the vi2000 in Canberra, Australia. On October 2, 2019, a 40-ton roll-up opening mechanism was successfully attached to the crane and Red Alert crew members removed the protective tarp and allowed the photos to be taken. Once the crane is brought to the ground, it will connect to the lab structure via the top-out boom system. The 55-meter long legs are a new addition to the crane as well as the use of two sets of legs increases the crane's stability for the top-out operation. The Red Alert team will remove the legs to permanently connect the lower and upper structure once the lab is completed. The steel structure will be painted using a color scheme of local rivers and nature.

Once completed, the lab will provide visitors the first look into the underground exploration of Australia's underground sandstone aquifers. In the year of completion, income from certain long-term contracts accounted for under either the percentage of completion method or percentage of completion-capitalized cost method is allocated among the prior taxable years based on actual contract price and costs instead of estimated contract price and costs. From Red Alert , the Basic construction yard is made from building blocks and is used in limited quantities. Usually, the blocks are brought to the construction site in an MCV, then manually placed at the location. 5ec8ef588b
