the pledge of allegiance was the first song we learned at my elementary school back in 1939 or 40. if it wasnt for the song at that time, id never even have heard the song in my life. i didnt like it and certainly didnt understand anything about it. i didnt know what an appeal was, or what a crescendo was, or what a testo was. however, i did understand that a principal was a kind of evil master and a chief was a king. i also knew that we were living under the reign of king george. my knowledge of things that werent directly at hand was sketchy at best, like i didnt understand the most basic parts of the human body and how they all work together. i certainly didnt know how to read, write, or count to 10 or 100. i didnt know how to make a living and how to enjoy life. in fact, id never heard of any of the things that they were teaching me at school. in other words, this is a really basic and simple example of how little kids know the basics. it seemed as though the whole world was laid out and each of us just had to learn how to navigate it, and it was just like finding a new country. im certain that there was a lot of trial and error and a lot of very bad decisions along the way. fortunately, we arent left in the dark anymore, but the light that was kindled in our darkness back then, took a long time to illuminate the dark corners of our souls. it wasnt until just after my seventh birthday that i made my first or rather my first really important decision about my life. it wasnt even a decision as much as it was an awakening to the fact that there was so much more out there and we could do it if we really wanted to. it was at that time that i learned that we could become anything we wanted to be.
