OS: Windows 10 64-bit Language: Multi-language Size: 98.9 Mb Every user can install this software. It does not bring any spyware with it. It is safe to install and use. It is completely safe to use. RefreshPC is a straightforward application whose purpose is to restore some of the computer's settings to default. It focuses on the Windows Registry, system services, temporary folders and Prefetch files. The installation procedure is quick and uneventful, without demanding special attention from the user. Once it finishes, you can check out the simple window with the minimalistic layout, representing RefreshPC's interface. Upon deployment the app offers to create a system restore point, in case the OS starts experiencing issues after all the modifications are made to the workstation. In the main application window the tool shows the name and architecture of the operating system. Initializing the settings restoration procedure is easily accomplished, by clicking a button. When this task is completed, RefreshPC brings up a window and reveals the total number of items cleared by the program, when it comes to each of the aforementioned Windows areas, after which you are required to restart the computer to apply the new changes. There are no other options available through this program. We have noticed a minimal consumption of CPU and system memory during RefreshPC's runtime. The application has a good response time and carries out a task swiftly, without hanging, crashing or showing error dialogs; we haven't encountered any issues in our evaluation. Thanks to its intuitive layout and overall simplicity, first-time users can easily figure out how to work with RefreshPC. This is a clean software. It has nothing to eat your system resources. This is a simple and handy utility, designed to restore the computer's hardware settings to their default state. The utility works on Windows 8, 7 and Windows Vista operating systems.Q: Best way to remove the parent div of an element? I want to hide the element with id #menu. But I dont know how to use the following without removing the element itself: $('#menu').hide(); I can use.remove() or.remove(), but I want to find the best way of using.hide() without removing the parent div. A: If you're using.hide() there's no need to use.remove(). If you want to avoid removing the elements use: $('#menu').parent().hide(); Or: $('#menu').closest('#menu').hide(); A: .closest('#menu').hide() or $(this).closest('#menu').hide() will do it. If you want to hide multiple elements in that case it's better to use.filter() $('#menu, #header, #footer').filter(':hidden').hide(); Online registration is now open for students and prospective faculty Thank you to those of you who have already registered for the Fall 2018 Class and we hope to see you on campus for this year's UISS conference. We have also opened the registration process for Fall 2019, with the assistance of Kaplan U at the top of the website. This is an important process, as students must register before the registration deadline in order to be considered for the next class, and this allows us to email those students in the Fall 2019 class to set up an appointment to meet for more information. We look forward to seeing you at the upcoming UISS conference and the faculty and students who join us in the classroom.In this week's show we discuss the changes coming to Age of Empires Online next month with one of the developers of the game, Craig Robinson. We talk about how things will be different for a multiplayer multiplayer game, and what these changes mean to players. We also talk about the new UI in the game, the new map and also the change in the game's resource mechanic. What do you think of Sonia Sotomayor's record of having an anti-racist bias? I think that in her work, she has had a particular bias. She has expressed particular views on race. She has not necessarily expressed in this body her views on race, but her statements in the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings for her judicial nomination are significant. For example, on the bus issue, she said that women need not be ashamed of their own sex. She wrote, "Sometimes the issues of racial equality in the United States are clouded with a failure to recognize the contributions of individuals and groups who have been systematically excluded from full and equal participation in the economic, political and social life of this country...." She says that busing was effective in New Haven, Connecticut, because it made the neighborhoods more integrated. She also says that busing is also important for New York City because it makes neighborhoods "integrated." She said that "there's nothing wrong with intermingling.... It is a good thing." She also supports affirmative action in employment and college admissions. She thinks that the Constitution requires affirmative action. She says, "[T]here are not two sides to a constitutional question." She also said that "racial classification should be closely scrutinized, and that the benefits to minorities that arise from racial classifications should be held to the highest standard of proof." She said that "it's important for the law to take into account the social realities of contemporary society, including the conditions that some children face by virtue of their parents' race." This bias against affirmative action and race-based relief seems to be present in her judicial opinions. For example, in her decision in Regents of the University of California v. Bakke
