[Eosinophilic cystitis]. A 78-year-old woman was referred to our clinic because of an intermittent abdominal discomfort. Besides a history of hypertension and hyperlipidemia she was not known to have any inflammatory bowel disease. An intermittent abdominal discomfort had been present for a period of approximately 6 months. Performing a colonoscopy, a tumour-like mass was found, which seemed to originate from the base of the colon. The biopsy of this mass revealed inflammatory cells with focal extravasation and reactive changes in the surrounding mesenchymal tissue. After surgical resection, the histological examination of the tissue revealed foci of eosinophilic inflammation. This inflammatory reaction was further supported by the positive immunohistochemical staining for eosinophil granules. Because of the histological picture and the absence of known causes of cystitis, we diagnosed eosinophilic cystitis. Only 10 cases of eosinophilic cystitis have been reported in the medical literature so far.
