The purpose of this study is to assess the efficacy of communication skills training for English as a second language (ESL) and non-ESL undergraduate medical students. The two principal educational interventions assessed are the use of Interactive Group Discussions (IGD) and General Communication Training. General Communication Training is a non-group-based model that involves small group interaction and role play. IGD is a group-based discussion model that involves a small number of faculty members who facilitate discussion of assigned case material. Objective: This research will test the effect of communication skills training on the attitudes and communication skills of medical students. The objective of the study is to identify the skills that are most effective in developing communication skills.
