The program can now import RAW image files from multiple camera formats (thanks Sony!). I was pleased to see this include the unusual but useful Nikon NEF format. Though the program accepts the raw data in NEF, it does not appear to automatically generate a native TIFF file as it does with the traditional DNG format. Visually, the imported NEF appears to be a perfectly acceptable JPEG. Also, there are additional correction controls if the image was first saved in the JPEG format. Lightroom 5 also supports PDF rendering of static images, something Canon has not done with its EOS Viewer application.

Photoshop on the web now enables Photoshop's powerful selection tools to work within a browser with Auto Mask, which adds intelligent guidance on masking regions in an image. When you add pixels to an image, Auto Mask (beta) highlights which parts of the image are outside selection boundaries, and tells you when to mask and when to discard pixels. You can also easily reproduce the selection in Photoshop. Photoshop on the web enables you to select the best content in your image and past it into another layer. Now, when you see an image that's already on a canvas, you can add it to a layer in the browser. You can now also manage and edit layers in the browser. Photoshop elements have included this capability for many years, but with Photoshop on the web you can select these layers and use the Object Selection tool and content tab, and add, adjust and delete the content on the fly in Photoshop by dragging and dropping it, or by using the Fill, Invert, Mask, and Adjustment sliders. You can also now auto-import web content to your image. With Photoshop on the web, you have access to your entire catalog of custom presets from online design sites or websites that make images with Photoshop. You can import images that are geotagged with location data, such as Dribbble , Artsy , Blobtricks , and even Instagram , directly to Photoshop and easily adjust the content on the fly. You can provide feedback to the website in the comments or ask the website to add it to their library. After a few seconds, you can now access your new content in
