First, you must obtain a cracked version of the software from a trusted source. Once you have downloaded the cracked version, you must disable all security measures, such as antivirus and firewall protection. After this, you must open the crack file and follow the instructions on how to patch the software. Once the patching process is complete, the software is cracked and ready to use.

You can tell that the "smart previews" feature is the single biggest factor, because my CPU and my GPU (7570) are doing a lot of work. With the "smart previews" off, the CPU usage is around 20%, and the GPU around 10-15%. I'll go back to the 10D and 10-45 combo, and see if I can get the "smart previews" feature switched off, and if I can get performance up to the point I can get where I am now without using the "smart previews". If I do, that'll be a bonus. As for performance in general, and aside from the "smart previews", I get the best performance when I switch off the "Expose Preview" and "Wet Tone Threshold", because I get the "Exposure Inverted" checkbox disabled. I suspect there's a lot more low-level software in LR 5.2 for video, so I'm hoping this feature is a totally separate module from the rest of lightroom and doesn't impact my image previews at all. When I'm in the Developer module and "Exposure Inverted" is off, it causes "Smart Preview" to work, but it's the only thing that works. If I switch it on, every preview is jerking to a halt with a crazy number of frames per pull, and I have to switch it off again. Without doubt, Lightroom, although still capable of sky-high performance, has started to hit the roadblock that Adobe experienced with Photoshop in Windows Vista. There is a constant, slow performance-degrading software / hardware issue just waiting to strike. This is one of the reasons why I have switched to Apple's Final Cut Pro X for video editing. Even so, Lightroom remains as the premier choice for RAW editing, and I still feel that it is far superior to anything else I have ever used. I have only done a very small number of digital images in the past - hardly any, actually. Only my work requires me to do so, and if you are any of the following, you are already well aware of these facts: visual arts, commercial graphics, documentary photographers, and scanners.
