One of the first things you're going to notice with the Adobe Photoshop app is the huge amount of empty space on the left side. This is because it's perfectly sized to use the Apple Pencil for doodles and notes and to take notes for you as you work. You can access the Pencil's doodle functionality from the Touch Bar by tapping the S Pen button and swiping left or right. You can take notes by swiping down from the Touch Bar, then tapping Done and swiping up. Yet another aspect to take into account is your current computer's processing power. If you are planning to purchase a new computer, then this can have a huge effect on what your workflow is. I purchased a brand new workstation computer at the time I got my iPhone 6s Plus, and that computer was an utter $10k. That was quite the investment for a computer that only concentrated on photography (and games). If you have a minimal computer and a minimum of 512GB of RAM - you will struggle to over 10,000 photos on a regular basis. A computer that has 16GB of RAM will be able for more tasks concurrently. I'm glad I touched on Loyalty programs here. Photographers get offered more discounts and benefits by the membership that they currently have signed up for. This is free for Lightroom Photography plan or Lightroom mobile, for example, but as with most discounts and benefits you are only able to access them when connected to your Adobe account.

Photographers are offered discounts for events and special usually offered benefits. As I touched on earlier, these benefits are tailored to tailor to you; so you may get discounts for paid memberships, free software or other discounts. The more that you have your own investments and pay for, the more you get with the subscription. Photoshop vs Lightroom is very much around the discounts and benefits that you get by having a subscription. Photoshop / Photoshop Express require a computer that has at least 2GB of system RAM (where the RAM refers to random access memory). Although you can install the program on a computer with an iPad, it is not recommended. Some computer configurations do not offer enough RAM to host Photoshop. e3d0a04c9c
